

ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND LINGUISTICS

The certificate provides students with a focused understanding of the structure of the English language (in terms of its sound system, grammar, meaning, and vocabulary), as well as an understanding of how the spread of English contributes to language contact, urbanization, globalization, multilingualism, and many other aspects of language and society. The program is open to all undergraduate students at UM-Dearborn as well as non-degree seeking students with or without college degrees. The certificate allows students to have flexibility to plan their own program completion by selecting different combinations of the courses from two separate modules. Only one course is required and the remaining 9 credit hours may be taken in ways reflecting their own academic interest. Students interested more in the English language portion may choose two courses from that module and one from the Language variation in society module and those keen on language variation can choose two courses from that module and one from the English language module.

Certificate Requirements

The certificate allows students to have flexibility to plan their own program completion by selecting different combinations of the courses from two separate modules. Only one course is required and the remaining 9 credit hours may be taken in ways reflecting their own academic interest. Students interested more in the English language portion may choose two courses from that module and one from the Language variation in society module and those keen on language variation can choose two courses from that module and one from the English language module.

The required courses introduce fundamental concepts and frameworks in linguistics and provide an accessible yet comprehensible overview of lexical, phonological, morpho-syntactic, and sociolinguistic features of the English language.

The English Language courses discuss the structure of the English language, in addition to linguistic variation and language contact phenomena in English speaking communities in the US and around the world. Students will be introduced to factors leading to language change, language shift, language acquisition, and language maintenance as well as cultural, political, and historical components of language variation.

The courses on language variation in society survey how linguistic concepts and theories involving English and other languages can be applied to practical issues in the real world. Particularly identity construction in marginalized communities and linguistic struggle and discrimination in the workplace and education will be addressed. Also, students will be able to study the use of English in diverse social domains such as political discourse, print media, broadcasting, popular culture, and social media and develop critical thinking and language analysis skills.

Code	Title	Credit Hours
------	-------	--------------

12 credit hours are required:

Required course: 3

Select one of the following:

LING 280	Introduction to Linguistics
or LING 480	Concepts in Linguistics

English Language Courses: 3-6

Select one or two of the following:

LING 383	American English
LING/ENGL 461	Modern English Grammar
LING 474	Second Lang Acquisition: Engl
LING/ENGL 482	History of the English Lang
LING 484	World Englishes

Or other LING course with primary focus on the English Language by Petition.

Language Variation in Society Courses: 3-6

Select one or two of the following:

LING 385	Language and Gender
LING 422	Language and Popular Culture
LING 475	Lang Diversity: Arab Amer Comm
LING 476	Sociolinguistics

Or other LING course with primary focus on language variation by Petition.

NOTES REGARDING THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND LINGUISTICS CERTIFICATE:

1. A maximum of two transfer courses (six credit hours) may count toward the certificate.
2. A maximum of nine credit hours may simultaneously count toward the certificate and the Linguistics Minor.
3. Up to 9 credits may double up with your major, if applicable.
4. A maximum of one class pass/fail is allowed.
4. A minimum 2.0 GPA in the courses counting toward the English Language and Linguistics Certificate and a minimum 2.0 cumulative GPA are required to earn the certificate.