MIDDLE EAST STUDIES

The Middle East Studies BA is a multi-disciplinary program that requires three-years of foreign language study (typically in Arabic, though the program can accept transfer credit in other languages with certain conditions). Students build skills and knowledge through coursework in three areas: A) History, B) Language and Literature, and C) Social and Cultural Studies. They complete their degree with a capstone course that draws upon that expertise. The program allows for an emphasis on the transnational and diasporic experiences of people with heritage ties to the region so students can take advantage of our campus' Center for Arab American Studies and the Armenian Research Center. In addition to preparing students for graduate study of the modern Middle East, this BA provides a solid foundation for a variety of careers in which language, social, and cultural expertise alongside oral and written communication skills are desirable.

The Middle East Studies Certificate (MEST) is a credential for students who have studied the history and culture of the Middle East from a variety of disciplinary perspectives. Requiring a minimum of 12-16 upper level credits after the completion of prerequisites, the MEST Certificate can complement your major or stand alone as a post baccalaureate credential.
